Content: This undergraduate freshmen seminar will review the history of modern Israel from the inception of Zionism to the post 1967 war period. The four periods of study will be the ideological formations (to 1917), Zionist autonomy in Palestine and nation-building (to 1949), the problems and successes of sovereignty (to 1977) and the quest for identity and normalization (to the present). Issues to be discussed will include the structure of the old and new Yishuv, immigrations to Eretz Yisrael, British rule in Palestine, relationships with the great powers, sociological associations and cleavages, Israel-Diaspora relations, American Jewry and Israel, religion and state policy interaction, the political and economic systems, constitutional issues, Arab-Israeli wars, American-Israeli relations, the negotiating process, and quest for recognition from Arab neighbors. Several guest speakers will participate in the class. The focus of this course is the period to the 1967 War; by the reality that there were only 13 classes of two hours each, insufficient time was available to focus on Mizrahi/Sephardim (video), Russian, and Ethiopian immigrations to Israel, gender issues in Israeli society, or on Arab-Israeli negotiations. Other courses given at Emory and college syllabi provided in this listing cover those topics. There were 14 students in this freshmen class. The spaces on the syllabus that are empty were filled with student last names, as they led discussions on those assigned readings from week to week. Some of the items here were found on websites, many of them may have disappeared, but the articles are likely remaining elsewhere. Videos that were recorded since 2005 have been added to the syllabus where their contents is relevant to a particular topic.

Please note that when this syllabus was crafted, www.israeled.org did not exist. Items that appear on the syllabus were accessed by students in 2006 from the reference library reserve list made for this course. Now that many of these articles, documents and sources appear at www.israeled.org They are hyperlinked here but were not for the student who originally took the course.

Grading:

There will be two examinations: a mid-term and a final. The first examination will cover the period up to Israel's establishment in 1948; the final examination will focus primarily on the period from 1948 to the present. The mid-term examination will be held on March 2006. The final examination will be held on May 4, 2006, from 8:30-11:00am. For the mid-term and final examinations, please bring two (2) large blue books to class; please do not write in or on the blue books before the examination. If you would like your final examination paper returned to you by mail, please provide me with a self-addressed manila envelope with sufficient postage. Otherwise, your final examinations will appear in a box outside my office door at 121 Bowden Hall until September 15, 2006.

Students are expected to do all the readings assigned, both the required texts and reserved readings. Students should complete the readings for a particular week prior to meeting each Monday. Students are expected to be at every class. Unless there are exceptional circumstances, if you miss one class session, you can expect your grade to be reduced by one full grade.
